She gave birth to a daughter named Clementine, and after the premature death of her husband in 1805 at the age of 27, she assumed control of the family business and augmented the prestige of the house with forward-thinking innovations. In 1972, the Veuve Clicquot Businesswoman of the Year Award was established, recognizing outstanding females in business worldwide. Since it was purchased by LVMH group, Veuve Clicquot CEOs have always been females.
